

Mokena Sewer Case Postponed

Round number 2 of the Mokena sewer fight was staged Monday morning in the Will County court of Joliet when attorneys for the Mokena Local Board of Improvements, the engineering firm who drew the plans for the proposed $70,000 sanitary sewer system and attorneys for the objecting property owners appeared before Judge Henry F. Ruel of Kankakee County. As soon as the court opened, attorney Wellnitz of Joliet, representing the St. Mary parish at Mokena asked for a continuance on the ground that the Archbishop was out of Chicago and that he was not prepared to go ahead with the case until he had conferred with the church official. Judge Ruel, out of courtesy to the church said he would grant a continuance of the case until next Tuesday afternoon at 1:30 o'clock.

Attorney Edward Nadelhoffer of Joliet representing the Mokena property owners in the McIntosh subdivision and in the village and attorney Snapp of the law firm of Snapp, Heise & Snapp also entered pleas for a continuance.

Attorney G. F. Gilbert of Chicago, representing the engineering firm of Chicago who drew the plans for the proposed sewer system drew a sharp retort from Judge Ruel when he told the judge the case could be settled in fifteen minutes. The attorney was told by the judge that Will County did not need Chicago lawyers to tell them what to do.

Both sides were represented by a group of interested spectators. The Mokena Local Board of Improvements was represented by Albert Braun, Richard Hensel, John Balaz and Edward Martie.

Property Owners Pay Own Street Improvements

Just because the new candidates for village trustees and for president of the village board of Mokena, are opposed to special assessments that are burdensome to the property owners of the village, the residents of Mokena must not be led to believe that these men are opposed to all improvements, for such is not the case, and they have done much toward improving Mokena as was shown in the writing of the past records of these candidates in last week's issue. The candidates, namely, John C. Nielsen, for president of the village board and George Koeller, Milton Krapp and Wm. Semmler for village trustees, stand for improvements which do not entail a heavy burden for a natural life time on the property owners of the village. No community can grow without improvements, but these improvements must not be of an unneeded nature and of excessive cost.

DO NOT LET ANYONE, no matter who they may be, tell you that Mokena is going to boom if a lot of improvements are put in by special assessments, for such is not the case. It takes more than expensive improvements to make a town. Here is a point that no property owner must lose sight of. If you allow the special assessment crowd to gain a foothold they will continue to unload other costly, so-called, improvements on the community, same as has been the case in nearby Cook County towns and with dire results. Just as soon as costly improvements are made your taxes would also be doubled for the cry then would be that the improvements had increased property values, and naturally if property values go up, taxes on same are also increased, so you can see that you will pay and continue to pay more and more each year. At the same time you will find that real estate is hard to sell in a community that is burdened with a special assessment load. It is NOT true, that only one special assessment covers all the cost, for if by chance the estimated cost is not sufficient to cover the original cost of an improvement, a supplemental assessment can be levied on your property which virtually amounts to another mortgage and on top of that, you will have to pay interest on the supplemental assessments, as well as interest on the original assessment and an increase in taxes to boot.

While we are on the subject of improvements, let us review a few instances that occurred a few years back:

One of the previous village boards, part of whose membership is now serving on the present board conceived the brilliant idea of paving every street in the village at a cost of approximately $80,000 by special assessment and on top of that they hoped to put in a sewer system and then perhaps extend the village water system, completely reversing the usual process of first installing the water, then sewer and last paving. This showed incompetency. The residents of the village, however, killed off the street paving bee and when certain members of the board sought re-election they were badly defeated.

This was one idea of improving the village by foisting a heavy burden on a handful of property owners for there are only about 150 property owners in the village. Now then, here is another improvement picture. When the property owners on Neithammer avenue, Parker St., and Midland avenue lived on mud streets, the village was so poverty

TINLEY GARDEN CLUB NEWS

One of the most delightful social gatherings of the winter season in Tinley Park took place Saturday evening when the Tinley Park Garden Club members entertained their husbands and friends at the home of Mayor and Mrs. Wm. Funk. Mrs. Funk had so kindly offered the use of her basement for the occasion. The large room had a most cozy atmosphere with rugs on the floor. Comfortable chairs were provided. In fact this basement was as neatly arranged as any living room would be in average homes. There was a miniature pond in one corner of the room in which gold fish were swimming. The floor about the pond was painted green to imitate grass. In another part of the room was a cute winter scene showing a yard with snow covered shrubs, trees, walks, and a dog sitting in front of the door of the house. Even the milk bottle was in evidence. This sure was a very clever piece of work all of which was planned and done by Mrs. Funk. In addition to this was a cozy fireplace scene painted on the basement wall. This painting was also the handiwork of Mrs. Funk. The novel decoration feature was found in 22 Christmas trees which lined one side of the basement.

A very very pleasing program featured the evening. The program was opened by Mrs. R. J. Hug, the president of the Garden Club and in turn announced that the club's new program chairman, Mrs. Jennie Klepper was in charge of the party.

Greetings were extended to the club by Mayor Wm. Funk, Fred Goebel, president of the Tinley Park Lions Club and editor Wm. Semmler of the Tinley Park Times.

John Boeyer who is connected with the International Harvester Company brought a stereopticon lantern and slides on bird life from the Harvester Company. Sixty colored plates of birds were thrown on the screen. Mrs. Boeyer operated the stereopticon and Mrs. C. Goessel read the titles on the bird plates. They were much appreciated.

After the various games and contests were played and prizes given, a sumptuous luncheon was served. In one of the contests R. J. Hug, Wm. Semmler and Mr. Duff tied. After another tryout the editor won the contest.

A delicious luncheon was served and Judge C. Goessel "poured the coffee". Editor and Mrs. Semmler were the guests of honor of the evening. The club members thank all those who helped make this affair such a fine success.

Only the immediate members of the family visited the couple. Both Mr. and Mrs. Baumgartner are enjoying fair health. A more elaborate celebration was planned but because of illness in the family it was a quiet affair. Mr. Baumgartner is a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Baumgartner. Mrs. Baumgartner is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. August Schieferstein of Chicago. Mr. and Mrs. Baumgartner have three sons and five daughters. The sons are: Walter of Frankfort, William of Flossmoor, Alfred of Virginia, Minnesota. The daughters are Mrs. Rose Lucas of Oak Park, Mrs. Mabel Wunderlich and Mrs. Alma Sippel, both of Joliet. Hundreds At Final Rites of Bank Official

Hundreds of mourners attended the final rites held Monday afternoon in memory of Louis F. Daniel, vice-president of the Orland State Bank who died at the Burnside hospital following a major operation.

The Orland Park M. E. church where the services were held was thronged far beyond its capacity by the great concourse of relatives, neighbors and friends who came to pay their final tribute of honor to the man who had lived among them all his life. Rev. Paul Sanders of the Orland M. E. church preached a sermon fraught with words of hope, and comfort.

A male quartet sang a number of selections. The floral tributes were many and beautiful. Officials of the bank served as the pall bearers.

Louis F. Daniel was born in Orland Township February 25, 1868. In October 1896 he was united in marriage with Miss Mary Cure. He resided in Orland township until 11 years ago when he moved to Worth.

Mr. Daniel was a kind husband and father and sincere friend.

Mr. Daniel was associated with the Orland State Bank for quite a number of years and served as its vice-president for many years.

Surviving him are his widow, 3 sons, Harry of Orland, Louis and Elmer of Worth; one daughter, Mrs. Nettie Cooper of Orland, two grandchildren and one brother, Henry Daniel of Chicago.

Burial was in the Cooper cemetery, Orland. The community has lost a valuable citizen and business man.

Orland People Donate Land For S. W. Highway

Dr. W. R. Schussler, president of the Southwest Towns Chamber of Commerce, reports that much interest is being taken in the proposed extension of the Southwest highway from Orland thru Will County to Elwood to connect with route 4. Dr. Schussler says the plan is to run the highway thru the forest preserve at Orland by the soldiers camp and then cross 143rd street at the Stahulock farm and proceed parallel the Wabash right of way to the point where a spur runs from the Wolf road southwest to the Will County line. It is proposed to continue the Southwest Highway from Marley to New Lenox along the Wabash and from New Lenox southwest to Elwood. A mile of right of way is being donated thru the Stahulock farm according to Dr. Schussler. He also states that the route mentioned has been considered favorably by both Senators Barr and Huebsch and that Gov. Louis Emmerson also favors this routing. The highway is to be built from the gas tax funds. A committee consisting of Dr. Schussler, Dr. S. S. Knox, Wm. Beagley and Edgar Cooper were to have conferred with the county board of Cook County about the highway in question this week.

Exciting Case Tried In Tinley Park Court

The case of G. Habenicht vs. J. Cooney recently called in the court of Judge C. Giesel in Tinley Park was continued to Saturday March 7th is scheduled to be held at the Tinley Park village hall at 3 o'clock on that date due to the shortage of space in the court room of Judge Giesel.

The litigants who were recently in an auto accident near South Holland are both represented by attorneys and if the number of people present at the previous call of the trial constitute anything it surely will be an interesting trial.

One of the main points of interest in the above mentioned trial no doubt will be that the defendant has already pleaded guilty to a reckless driving charge before Judge Applegate of Harvey.

It is also rumored that the defendant along with others had been caught in a flat in Chicago recently and relieved of guns in their possession.

Other trials scheduled for Saturday before Judge Giesel are: Mailhot vs. Patno & Hirsch vs. Le Mieux

Former Mokena Men Arrested As Robbers

Donald Carpenter, 25 and Harold Younger, 26, former Mokena residents, now of Humboldt, Illinois, are in the Yorkville jail after confessing to the robbing of the Farmers State Bank at Millbrook, Monday Feb. 23. In addition they admitted to sheriff Martin Hexdall stealing a Cadillac automobile that belonged to J. C. Stevens, a real estate dealer at Matton.

On February 23, the two men entered the Millbrook bank and tendered a gas bill as a check on the pretext of wanting to cash it. When Ralph Wittie, cashier of the institution looked up he faced a revolver and was ordered to lie flat on the floor while the two men scooped up the loose currency from the cash drawer. Saturday afternoon the two men were arrested at Charleston, Ill.

TO THE PUBLIC:

Here are a few items on the proposed Mokena sanitary sewer assessments which are of very deep interest. According to the assessment record the St. John Evangelical church is assessed $488.86 on their property. The St. Mary church is assessed $369.81. The Immanuel Lutheran church parsonage $138.51. Public property of the village of Mokena, the lot on which the water tower and village hall are located and the park site on which the M. E. and Lutheran churches are located is assessed at $925.14. The old and new school property is assessed at $1403.58 making a total of $3325.90 on church, public and school property which means that all the residents of the village are obliged to pay this in addition to their own assessments or taxes.

Who pays these assessments, you or I or Santa Claus?

At the hearing at the court house in Joliet last Monday, the engineers had an attorney representing their interests which is six per cent of the estimated cost or $4013.10.

It seems it is a fight between the engineers and the people of Mokena. Why should outsiders run the affairs of this village? Was our present board elected to represent and protect the village citizens or the corps of Chicago engineers?

Did some bright energetic high pressured person outsmart our master mind.

We hear the cry "Patronize Home Trade". Why let outsiders get $70,000 or more of our money.

Supposing all of the sewer objectors would do their shopping outside of Mokena? It would not seem right and yet on the other hand a great many of our citizens feel that taking $70,000 out of the village and spending it with outsiders is not a fair break to the taxpayers either.

Types of Husband, as One Writer Sees Them

There are only three kinds of husbands in the world and it is a question whether any of them are handy to have around the house, according to Richard Connell, in Country Home. Connell classifies husbands under the headings of Alpha, Beta and Gamma, and rates himself as an expert in the latter class.

"The Alpha husband is growing increasingly rare in North America," says Connell. "He not only can but cheerfully does wash and dry the children and the dishes, promenade with the pup, put down the new linoleum, fix the furnace, chop ice for the sarsaparilla and rig up devices for closing windows on cold mornings."

"The Beta husband likes to putter around the house, but he likes to putter at what he likes to putter at. If his bent is toward carpentry, he will fill the house so full of shelves, cabinets and other specimens of his art that the only guests who can visit there will be midgets."

"Then there is the Gamma husband, who is about as useful around the house as a peashooter in the next war. To this group I belong."

STATE CAPITOL NEWS

Hiram L. Williamson, Secretary of the Illinois Press Association.

A bill limiting the hours of employment for women in certain occupations to eight hours instead of ten during any one day has been introduced by Representative Michael L. Igoe, of Chicago, in the legislature. The limit applies for females working in mechanical or mercantile establishments, factory, laundry, hotels, barber shop, beauty parlor, restaurants, telegraph or telephone establishments, places of amusement, or for corporations engaged in the public utility business. The bill also provides that a female may be employed for nine hours per day if such overtime is deducted from her working hours of that week, so that in no case she is employed more than 48 hours per week. Certain exceptions are made to these provisions.

Senator Simon E. Lantz has introduced in the senate a 42 page bill providing for a state income tax, declaring that if it becomes a law the city and village taxpayer will be relieved of $23,000,000 in property taxes and the farmer of $7,000,000 annually. He submitted this bill as a substitute for one he introduced earlier in this session and gives as his reason for so doing that the Illinois Agricultural association is supporting this revised bill "because under this new bill the tax collector will be sufficient to relieve property of all taxes for state purposes except principal and interest on the waterway and soldiers' compensation bonds."

The bill provides for a tax on incomes of persons, with an exemption of $1,000 for single persons, $2,000 for married persons and $500 for each child under eighteen or other dependent. The taxable income is determined by deducting business expenses and all general taxes on property, including personal property, from gross income and further by deducting the personal exemption from the net income.

A health certificate for every worker who handles milk, including wagon drivers, the use of only mechanical cappers and of electrical solutions of specified strength for sterilizing bottles, are the leading features in a new set of minimum sanitary requirements for milk pasteurization plants in Illinois which have been adopted by the state department of public health.

Dairy herds, maintained by and for the 40,000 wards of Illinois, produced almost one million gallons of milk in 1930. A survey of milk production made by the department of public welfare, under the direction of Director Rodney H. Brandon, places the amount used in the institutions at 1,743,356 gallons of which the state owned herds produced 54.6 per cent.

Among other things to be discussed at the March meeting of the Illinois state fair advisory board and the state board of agricultural advisors, will be the item of the "free gate" for the state fair. Its advocates say that since the fair is educational in its nature there should be no gate charge, but that concessions should be willing to pay more for space since the crowds would be larger. The grandstand charges and bleacher fees would be continued.

The Illinois Supreme court recently handed down a decision holding unconstitutional a section of the statutes which has been in force since 1827, in holding that juries are not to be judges of the law but are to pass on the facts in the case, while the presiding judge will interpret the statutes.

The three cent gas tax was upheld by the Supreme court in a decision handed down February 18, in a case of the state against the Deep Rock Oil company, in which Attorney General Oscar E. Carlstrom sought to recover $69,872.75. The oil company attacked the law on its constitutionality and also sought release from this tax because the gas was sold to the city of Chicago for use in its municipal owned automobiles. The court held that not only was the law constitutional but that municipalities should pay the tax because the streets of the city are held in trust for the use of the public of the entire state, just the same as public highways outside corporation limits.

Representative Leo P. Crowley, of Peoria, has introduced a bill in the general assembly prohibiting candidates for the general assembly from spending more than $600 for primary expenses or for election expenses. It would require candidates to file itemized expense bills with the secretary of state within ten days after the primary or general election.

Amendment of the deadly weapon act is sought in house bill 204 introduced by Representative Elmer J. Schnackenzger to prohibit any person from carrying a firearm of a size which may be concealed upon the person in a motor vehicle with the intent to commit crime. It also prohibits any person who has been convicted of certain crimes of violence or of carrying a deadly weapon within the past ten years or against whom a criminal proceeding is pending or who is a habitual associate of thieves from carrying such a firearm.

The art department of MacMurray college (Illinois Woman's college), Jacksonville, has received from the Carnegie Corporation of New York an unusually fine gift which consists of equipment for the teaching of art history and are appreciation courses. The collection has a value of at least $5,000 and its first consignment, consisting of a group of books, was received at the college recently. It includes 1,800 reproductions in photography and color facsimile of the greatest works in architecture, sculpture and painting. There are 50 prints representing different processes and schools from the Sixteenth century to the present day, a set of textiles in 35 pieces dating from antiquity to modern times and 200 books of every period and people. The books are in French and German as well as English.

Garret DeF. Kinney, director of the department of finance, has issued a statement of the manner of handling the gas tax to the effect that all money collected is turned over to the state treasury as soon as checks received in payment of the tax are cleared by the banks, and that at no time does the department have more than $2,000,000 in its depositories in the process of collection, and generally, the amount is much less. Every effort is made by the department of finance, he declares, to hasten the payment of the gas tax money into the state treasury.

House Bill 4, introduced by Hon. Joseph H. Davis, member of the house of representatives, is now ready for third reading in the house. The bill provides that time dust manufactured at the Southern Illinois penitentiary shall be furnished free to persons desiring to use it for agricultural or horticultural purposes. This will be a big asset for the farmers of Illinois and will provide labor at the penitentiary.

In a special message to the Fifty-seventh general assembly on the revenue situation Gov. Louis L. Emmerson called attention to the need of economy and the shortage of receipts because of the large amount of Cook county taxes that would normally be collected and available this year, but probably will not be paid into the state treasury until the middle of 1932, as well as a shortage in 1928 and 1929 tax payments. He urged careful consideration to measures for financial relief for Chicago and Cook county, also to reduction of the burden of taxation in general by the application of strict economy, establishment of new sources of income, and improvement of the state revenue system so far as is possible under the constitution.

Hon. Homer J. Tice has introduced a bill in the general assembly amending sections of the act relating to corporations for pecuniary profits so that all corporation fees shall be based on the value of the stock received by the corporation at the date of issue and providing also that the minimum fee for par value stock will be based on the par value and in the case of no par value stock will be taxed at the rate of 2 cents per share.

Senator A. H. Cuthbertson introduced a joint resolution in the senate recently which provides that the state highway department designate a certain right-of-way across the state to be known as the "Emmerson Air Line Highway." It starts at the east state line and runs through Pana and then on to the bridge across the Mississippi river at Louisiana, Mo. No appropriation is asked, but state-aid roads would be utilized from Pana to the river. State route 16 is used from Pana to the Indiana line.

The Illinois Commerce commission is one of the busy departments of the state. An example of this is the fact that at a four-day session in Chicago there were 68 cases docketed for consideration. Some of these are important in that they deal with the motor bus and motor freight lines, while one was a case of the city of Chicago against the Chicago Railways company to compel it to move its tracks from Lake Shore drive, to make room for Chicago's Pageant of Progress.

The Illinois Farmers' Institute and its Domestic Science branch adopted a resolution at their meeting at Decatur recently, urging that the new woman's building being erected at the state fair grounds be named the "Governor Emmerson Building."

The last passenger train on the Rantoul division of the Illinois Central railway, formerly known as the West Lebanon & Leroy railway, was run a few days ago. Passengers and baggage will now have to travel to and from the towns by motor car or bus and the mails for and out of the towns will be handled by star route carriers. The railway was built in 1881-82 by Benjamin F. Gifford.

March 11 has been set as the date of the hearing by the senate committee on license and miscellany of the bills to repeal the Illinois liquor laws. A lengthy debate will likely be staged at this time.

The bill presented by Representative R. J. Branson prohibiting members of the general assembly from holding office or being employed by any municipal corporation or government agency whose interests might be affected by legislation, was killed in the house judiciary committee.

FASHION DECLARES IN FAVOR OF NAVY BLUE FOR SPRING

A NAVY blue jacket suit is front-page news for spring. So if you are aiming to start the season right, invest in just that—a navy suit of either serge or cheviot or any of the spongy woollens which are so fashionable just now.

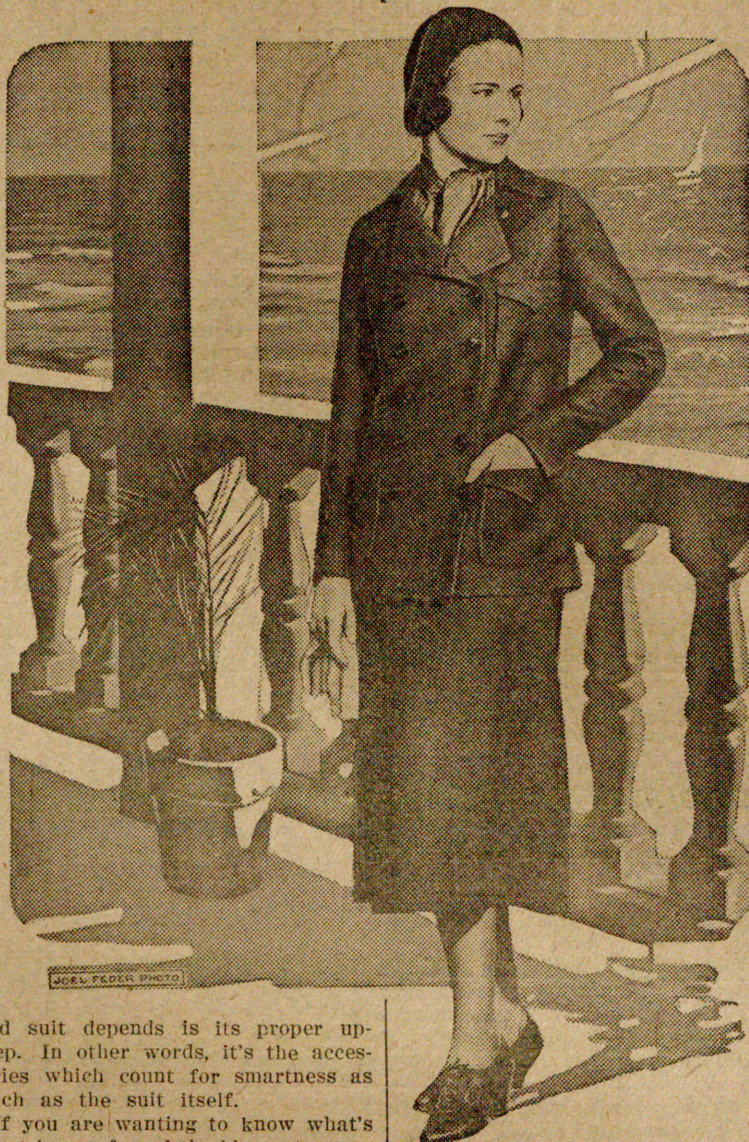

The act of acquiring a natty navy suit, or make it skipper blue if you choose, which is a near relation to navy and infinitely smart according to the new color chart, is only one step in the right direction. The real issue upon which chic for the aforeblouse, shoes and gloves by way of accessories. Then again the double-breasted jacket will be smart worn over a sleeveless white pique frock, later on.

Velvet Wrap to Stay.

All dressed up and ready to go to the dance, or the play, the banquet or the formal dinner means to the style-minded, for the most part, a frock of lovely lace topped with a velvet evening wrap.

The best part of the charming vel-

said suit depends is its proper upkeep. In other words, it's the accessories which count for smartness as much as the suit itself.

If you are wanting to know what's latest in scarfs and the blouse to wear with the spring 1931 navy or skipper blue suit, we will say it in one word—plaid. Of course if you prefer stripes, all well and good, for between plaids and stripes it is a fifty-fifty proposition. In either event "make it snappy" for the colors must be high so as to accent striking contrast.

If the smartly clad young woman in the picture were to remove her coat there would be a revelation of bright color, for the blouse which she is wearing with her "chanteur suit," as the designer calls it, is an animated plaid with scarf to match—an ascot scarf, if you please, for these narrow types worn inside of the coat collar and tied close up around the throat vet wraps which are flourishing "in society" at the present moment is that they promise to remain in the picture all through the coming spring and summer months. Evening wraps is the role they are playing just now, but later on they will make new conquests, as they pose effectively over dainty afternoon frocks of organdie, gay printed chiffons and such.

Seen in the original the gown and wrap as pictured in the foreground of the accompanying illustration presents an enchanting color symphony. The frock is of rose beige chanteuse lace.

in choker fashion and they are the "last word."

Notice that the jacket has the double-breasted high closing, turned-down military collar and the patch pockets which make it look almost like a uniform. These severe tailored effects are ever so good this season, remembering always that they must carry their message of chic with the aid of the swankiest sort of accessories. The hat topping this modish costume is a navy blue knitted turban, worn far back on the head, exposing the forehead and part of the hair.

Seeing that blue with white is a much lauded combination for spring and summer, with a navy blue suit like the one pictured one can effect many changes, such as white hat, emerald green transparent velvet. It is worn over an exquisitely beaded gown of white georgette.

While dainty velvet coats are very likely to be black, which makes them wearable with ones entire wardrobe of dressy frocks, then it comes to color matching, the superb age of tone and tints offered in the new velvets offer a tempta on to complement every frock with a coat which blends or contrasts to perfection, according to the will of the designer.

What with color contrast being so universally exploited in the world of fashion, especially for the jacket or light wrap, there is no doubt but what velvet with the wealth of color it has to offer will continue its triumphs in this realm.

Differences in Halos

In art the nimbus, or halo of light encircling the head of Christ, is usually of gold, enriched with a cross—a triangular nimbus for the Father, a square one for a person still living, and disk or fillet-shaped for a saint or martyr.

INDIGESTION GOES—QUICKLY, PLEASANTLY

When you suffer from heartburn, gas or indigestion, it's usually too much acid in your stomach. The quickest way to stop your trouble is with Phillips' Milk of Magnesia. A spoonful in water neutralizes many times its volume in stomach acids— instantly. The symptoms disappear in five minutes.

Try Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, and you will never allow yourself to suffer from over-acidity again. It is the standard anti-acid with doctors.

Your druggist has Phillips' Milk of Magnesia, with directions for use, in generous 25c and 50c bottles.

Their Turn

"Where are all the people running to?"

"It looks as though one of the bathers has gone out too far."

"Really! Now, perhaps we'll get a couple of chairs to sit on."

Avoid Burns from Mustard Plasters

When you have Rheumatic or Muscular Pains in the back, chest or limbs or if you have a cold coming on, try this simple treatment. It is more convenient, safer, cleaner and more effective than mustard plaster.

Get a bottle of Hoff's Liniment and apply it with brisk rubbing. Then saturate a cloth with Hoff's and apply to the painful area and in a few minutes you will feel the warming and stimulating effect of this powerful liniment.

Hoff's is different from ordinary liniments that are applied with rubbing alone. It brings a quick flow of blood to the affected area, reducing congestion and relieving pain. Get an eight ounce bottle of your druggist today for 60 cents. If you do not get relief in 30 minutes he is authorized to refund your money. Goodrich-Gamble Company, St. Paul, Minnesota.

1930 Best Year In Public Service Company History

"It is probably some evidence of the opinion of our management as to what is likely to happen in our own line of business, that we are proposing to go ahead on about the same basis of expenditure in 1931 as in 1930", said Samuel Insull, Chairman of the Public Service Company of Northern Illinois, at the annual stockholders' meeting on February 24. Expenditures made for the improvement of facilities and to take care of the development of the company's business must be made sometime in advance, according to Mr. Insull.

Authorization was voted by the stockholders to issue 200,000 additional shares of no par common stock in all respects on a parity with the present common stock of the company. Such stock is to be issued from time to time as seen fit by the board of directors. The present board of directors was unanimously re-elected.

Records of the company's operations in 1930 showed a savings to customers of $928,000 because of reduced rates instituted last August. It was anticipated that the total savings over a twelve month's period would amount to approximately $1,750,000.

In reviewing the company's business of 1930 it was shown to be the best year in its history. Gross business amounted to $35,405,930 in 1930, or upwards of six per cent more than the preceding year. After paying out $4,754,670 in dividends, which was somewhat in excess of the dividend paid out in surplus, which is approximately $227,000 more than the amount 1929, $2,809,376 was carried to surplus in 1929.

The BEST Gray Hair Remedy is Home Made

Apply to the hair twice a week until the desired shade is obtained. It will gradually darken streaked, faded or gray hair and makes it soft and glossy. Barbo will not color the scalp, is not sticky or greasy and does not rub off.

AN UNCHANGING GOSPEL FOR A CHANGING WORLD

Humanity's progress during the last decades has been bewildering. Science has stepped out with a vengeance. Comes a man named Einstein and calmly discards even respectable laws of nature. Life for the husky pioneer of years ago was a peaceful idyl compared with the dizzy pace set by the modern generation. Values and ideas, laws and customs, all are changing. Civilization is dashing somewhere, but the goal is not in sight. We hurry along but if honest must admit to more than slight confusion.

But though the world round about has changed, human nature remains the same. For material comfort your twentieth century man may require balloon tires and a radio, a vacuum cleaner and a thermos bottle; his spiritual needs differ in no whit from those of his remotest ancestor. He still needs a God who pardons and loves, a God whom he can love and call his Father. Baffled by life's mysteries and often buffeted by painful experiences he yearns for the assurance that his existence has a purpose and that somewhere there is peace.

An unchanging Gospel can meet this fundamental and unchanging need. It is the Gospel which Paul of Tarsus preached 1900 years ago and which, though but partially revealed, gave comfort to men for centuries before the coming of the Lord, the Gospel of a crucified Savior who died that men might live and be redeemed to their God.

That Gospel has gone out of style in many a church. It has not gone out of style in the Lutheran Church especially the Missouri Synod, the largest and most conservative organized group in the American Lutheran Church. That great body is not ashamed to confess with Paul that it is "determined not to know anything, save Jesus Christ and Him crucified." It takes the Bible in its entirety as the inspired Word of God. On that basis of that divine revelation it preaches the sinfulness and doom of man, it preaches above all the wondrous grace of God whose love in Christ has restored a fallen race. Faith in that Redeemer saves, not all the good that men can do.

Concordia Lutheran church, 148 Pl. & Hamlin Ave., continues to preach that age-old Gospel because it is convinced that despite all the changes "there is salvation in none other."

Basketball Tournament Starts at Gym

BASKETBALL, the premier indoor winter sport of our country, has swept into a deserved and universal popularity. High school and college alike have placed this game on a par with football, and in some centers field houses seating ten to fifteen thousand spectators have been built. Schools sponsoring building programs like this have had vision, while other schools have already built fine new gymnasiums, even now of insufficient capacity to care for the tremendous crowds seeking admission.

TRAINING FUTURE CITIZENS

A school plays an appreciable part in the making of a nation, and for the training of the youth of America, citizens are demanding modern, up to date schools with the most health-giving equipment that can be secured. Basketball trains the eye for accuracy, develops the brain for quick thinking, strengthens the physical body through exercise and last—but by no means the least—develops to a large degree the spirit of co-operation and fairness.

Midlothian with its beautiful new gymnasium and its wonderful basketball equipment now offers the youth of this community a place to partake in the cleanest and greatest indoor sport of today and I know every boy and girl in this community will appreciate the great work done by the Lions Club of Midlothian in installing this wonderful basketball equipment we now have in our new gymnasium at the Midlothian school.

MIDLOTHIAN BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

A series of games are to be played at the Midlothian School Gymnasium beginning March 5th and ending April 30th. Four teams are entered in this tournament, namely Midlothian, Tinley Park, Palos Park and Evergreen Park.

Two games will be played each Thursday evening and a prize will be awarded the winning team at the end of the tournament. Come out and enjoy seeing the greatest and cleanest indoor sport of all times. All games start at 8 o'clock sharp, and admission charge will be 25 cents.

Posen Women Aid Convent Fund Drive

As announced some time ago a monthly bunco party will be a feature of the social activities of St. Stanislaus parish in the future. The parties are given by a committee of twelve women made up of two representatives from each sodality in the parish who on the first Monday evening of every month will supervise the entertainment.

The first three parties of the series are for the benefit of the convent fund which now totals around four thousand dollars. The February bunco netted one hundred dollars and the March party given last Monday night was no less successful. Later parties will be for the benefit of other worthy parochial enterprises.

Members of the committee are: Mrs. Bruno Grzadzinski, chairman; Mesdames M. Malecha, J. Karpinski, J. Kuliakowski, B. Bobrzyk, J. Grzadzinski, J. Warszalek, A. Janowski, ad the Misses J. Rzednik, M. Szczyk, A. Jankowski, B. Cerekwicka.

Edna Weinberger Wins Township Spelling Contest

The Bremen Township Spelling Contest was held Thursday afternoon of last week at the Arbor Park school, District 145.

Edna Weinberger of Crestwood (Midlothian Public School) is the township champion in spelling. Marie DePaulo won the declamatory contest, and competed Monday for division honors with two other township champions but was defeated by the pupils from Oak Lawn.

The township champion speller will compete in the county contest in April. This is the third year that Crestwood has held first place, as Edna won last year also, and her brother, Richard, held first place the previous year.

We find there is still some confusion as to where persons in need of aid should go to obtain it. They should go in person to Otto C. Ziebell, 147th St., and Cleveland ave.; he will issue food and fuel to those who need them. For shoes and clothing call Seeley 6924 and ask for Miss Greenspoon. She will send a visitor to your home who will find out just what your needs are in the way of shoes and clothing and will bring them to you.

Those who are members of the Catholic church can secure aid through the Central Charity Bureau by calling Mrs. Fleming, Blue Island 698-Y2.

Any one needing medical or hospital care and are not in contact with any of the above mentioned organizations call the Nurse at Blue Island 2664 Y1 from 7 to 8 p. m. This is also the time and place to report contagion.

There has been so many changes taking place recently, it is difficult to know just where to turn for information or aid that is needed.

The Child Welfare conference at Robbins was very well attended in February and we find the mothers are carrying out instructions very closely, which means we will have a more healthy population beginning school each year.

DEMOCRATS DENY RUMOR OF NEW VILLAGE

The Bremen Township Regular Democratic Club, Inc., emphatically denies that they are supporting or intend to support a movement supposedly underfoot to incorporate a new village in Bremen Township under the name of Park Ridge, or any other name.

This organization has for its supporting policy the general lowering of taxes in Bremen township. Therefore, they say it would be foolhardy indeed to support any movement that by special assessment, etc., would tend to augment the already unbearable burden of taxation to its people.

Peter Lystra Resigns as Trustee

The regular meeting of the Markham Village Board was conducted with expediency last Thursday night, the Board of Local Improvements and the Board of Village Trustees having completed their business meeting in exactly twenty-five minutes.

Peter Lystra who has been given the endorsement of the Markham Citizens Club as candidate for president, handed in his resignation as trustee. This creates a vacancy which will be filled at the coming election, thus eliminating the need of a special election. As Edward Hunt was fourth highest in the caucus Wednesday, January 21, he automatically became endorsee of the Markham Citizens Club for trustee to fill the unexpired term of Peter Lystra.

The polling place for the village election will be at the Elmore Subdivision office southwest corner of 159th and Kedzie.

Exceptionally Good Program Comes to the Lyric

Jack Oakie is "put on the spot" in his newest starring picture, "The Gang Buster", which comes to the Lyric Theatre on Sunday. But with his usual dumb cockiness Oakie not only manages to survive shivery threats and countless dangerous but comes out on top revealing the original Oakie smile.

In his buoyant, boisterous manner, Oakie creates one of his best roles in "The Gang Buster". Cast as a small town insurance agent, Oakie comes to the big city and before he can say Jack Robinson, finds himself surrounded by all sorts of desperadoes modeled along the "charming" lines of Al Capone. But Oakie, nothing loath, tries to sell them insurance and when later on this gang kidnaps the girl he loves, Oakie sets out to do a little rescue act. And if you know your Jack Oakie, you'll understand that he accomplishes this mild feat with little effort. For gangsters or no gangsters, Oakie is a law abiding citizen who happens to be in love. And with love as the incentive, anything is possible. With Jack Oakie anyway.

Meade Outlines Policy of the Peoples Party

(Editor's Note-The following is a contributed article, written in the interests of the Goodfellowship club)

TO THE ELECTORS OF MIDLOTHIAN:

The Midlothian Goodfellowship Club and the Peoples Party have never been opposed to real improvement. Our policy from the beginning has been that the good old American policy of "the majority rules" should be applied in the matter of Special Assessments. And we have never changed either our name or our policy.

We believe the people of Midlothian are quite capable of deciding for themselves what improvements they want and when they want them. Only when a majority of the people whose property was to be assessed, objected to the high handed and rough shod methods of the "Cnoservative" Village Board have we gone into court to fight their battle for them; and always in an open and honorable way.

During the past two years, two petitions have been filed with the Village Board, asking for improvements to be paid for by Special Assessments. In each case the petition was signed by a majority of the resident owners of the property to be assessed; and in each case the improvement was promptly made. And a better job at a lower price than any similar work was ever done in Midlothian before.

The village engineers, selected and appointed by the officers elected by the Peoples Party, are now working on a plan to provide a drainage system for the entire village without imposing too heavy a burden on the tax payers. When these plans are completed, they will be submitted in detail to the property owners, and a majority of those to be assessed will determine whether or not the improvement shall be made.

Plans are also being worked out to secure Lake Michigan water in sufficient quantity to supply the entire village and at a price that will not materially increase present cost of the unsatisfactory water now being sold in many parts of the Village.

All of these plans are tentative. They will be worked out in detail and then submitted to the people who are to pay the bills. In no case will an officer of the Village elected by the Peoples Party, vote an assessment against your property until you have had a fair opportunity to express your wishes. We believe that public officers are public servants—not dictators. They are selected to carry out your wishes.

The candidates on the Peoples Party ticket are pledged to this principle. They have kept faith with you during the past two years, and you may rest assured they will not betray you during the next two years. However, the election of only a part of the Peoples Party ticket will put control of the Village in the power of those whose past performance has been so unsatisfactory. The safety of Midlothian depends upon the election of the entire Peoples Party ticket. Look well to your ballot. Richard J. White for President, Eric Burns, Kenneth Siddell, and Fred Kasten for trustees and Peter J. Johnson for Magistrate.

Respectfully,

FRANK P. MEADE, President
Midlothian Goodfellowship Club.

The Mud of Midlothian

Chief Terry announces that the village vehicle tax must be paid on or before March 15th.

Which is convincing proof that Chief Terry has no intention of running for an elective office this Spring.

He also announces that vagrant dogs are (for a good and sufficient reason) disappearing from the village and at the same time has the temerity to hang out a sign at his lunch counter which reads: "Hot Hamburger Sandwiches Here." This is the height of something or other.

The height of gall was attained by the party who asked Harry Clarke at the Clarke-Hulett garage, for the use of the greasing equipment there, the said party having already purchased the grease at Shears.

According to Al Clifton, it was reached sometime ago by the party who mailed him an overstuffed valentine with six cents postage on it.

Uncle Casey will give Mr. Clifton two valentines, absolutely free, if he can last through one entire game of the basketball tournament at the school.

The saddest sight of all the year is two skis waiting for a buyer just inside the door of Rudy Grill's hardware store.

There is a story in last week's issue of Detective Story Magazine, entitled, "Fetters," but it's about a bum, not a bun.

Uncle Casey never eats pastry, so he can't be poisoned.

Great credit must be given the people who, despite the past record of the Garden's water supply, had the nerve to start prairie fires in that section last week.

If you have bought any of the white mice advertised on the billboard next to Donato's, lock them up nights.

Chief Terry was seen outside of Grill's a few days ago. That probably means mouse traps, disappearing mice and some new sort of sandwich.

We hear that in Crestwood they think a plutocrat is one who drinks Pluto water.

Then there is the woman who told the editor of THE MESSENGER: "I think your paper is wonderful. I can hardly wait to get it each week, you see, I'm crazy about the funnies you run."

But why tell the editor. He does not even subscribe to the paper.

UNCLE CASEY.

"MOROCCO"

"Morocco", a love story of imperishable vividness and exotic charm, will be shown at the Lyric Theatre tonight and tomorrow night. Here is a vital and fascinating story of human passion and conflict; of an overpowering love that sweeps a ruthless man and woman of the world into a mad, relentless maelstrom of desire. "Morocco" is the story of a magnificent love beside which all other emotions seem petty and inconsequential.

Combined practical and imaginative resources bring to life the colorful, shadowy mystery of Morocco, city of twisted, darkened streets, veiled stealthy women, loud swaggering Legionnaires; city of wretched, indescribable poverty, and incomparable, glittering wealth and beauty. Such is the background of a great emotional story; of a pulsing, human drama whose intensity and startling dramatic effects command and deserve attention.

Seen in one of his best roles, as a reckless and ruthless soldier of fortune, is Gary Cooper. Master of the situation through the restraint and sincerity of his acting, Cooper creates a role that should win instant public favor. Also prominently cast in an important role is Adolphe Menjou, making an auspicious return to the audible screen.

The leading feminine role is portrayed by an actress who has never been seen by the American theatre going public. She is Marlene Dietrich, an ivory chisled, fair haired, exotic actress who achieved a startling triumph on the Berlin stage the past two years.

"ONE HEAVENLY NIGHT"

Evelyn Laye the blond, young English beauty who scored an overnight sensation on the New York stage last season makes her first appearance on the screen in "One Heavenly Night."

The London and New York stages have already paid tribute to the brilliant talents of Miss Laye. Following American debut in "Bitter Sweet", Percy Hammond, staid and blasé critic of the New York Herald-Tribune wrote of Miss Laye: "The loveliest prima donna this side of heaven."

The story of "One Heavenly Night" gives Evelyn Laye excellent opportunities for versatile acting in the role of a flower girl in a Budapest Cafe who is forced to impersonate the most notorious woman in Budapest. The picture's action is swift and sure, the comedy well

The Orland Park boys are becoming very much interested in making radio. Gordon Kay and Jim Pomeroy have constructed one which works very well. Robert Beagley and Merrill Cooper have also made over two radios and are planning a method by which they will be able to send messages between their homes.

The Rev. Baily Waltmire, secretary of the Social Service Commission of the Rock River Conference was the speaker at the Sunday Evening Forum sponsored by the Sunday Evening Club of the Orland Park M. E. Church.

Rev. Waltmire for a number of years has been prominent in promoting interest in the church in the problem of the working man and the underprivileged classes. It has been through his efforts that the Rock River Conference has taken some of the advance steps on the labor situation.

The problem of unemployment and the present unrest is a vital one before the American people to-day. The speaker presented some of the important reasons for this and the possible solution for some of our conditions. He is a very forceful and interesting speaker.

Be prepared to meet Him by learning to know Him. Make it a meeting of supreme joy or it may result in overpowering fear and loss of self. Come to the Lenten devotions for a better acquaintance with Christ.

THE STORY

With his English wife, Catherine, and son, Jeems, Henry Bulain, French settler in Canada in 1749, cultivates a farm adjacent to the Tonteur seigneurie. As the story opens the Bulgains are returning from a visit to the Tonteurs. Catherine's wandering brother, Hepsibah, meets them with presents for the family.

Catherine took off her cape and hood and patted her hair more properly into place before a mirror hanging on the wall. Henri knew how fast her heart was tripping as he took her hands and held them for a moment and saw a mist of tears behind her lashes. It had been two years since she had seen Hepsibah, two years of yearning and praying and hoping for this irresponsible brother, the first of her close blood ties, who came and went with the inconstancy of the winds and yet had never succeeded in spoiling her dream of having him some day as a permanent member of her little family. Each time he came to them, Hepsibah was full of promise, swearing upon his soul that he had made up his mind to remain with them forever, as Catherine pleaded with him to do; and then, some day or night, he would disappear with all his belongings, and no one would see or hear him go, and it might be six months, or a year, or, as in this instance, even longer before he returned, ready to promise and swear upon his soul all over again but sure to steal away in the end as before.

Each time that he came, he bore a huge pack on his shoulders, as if partly in penance, and the opening of this pack and the distributing of its contents had come to be the biggest event in Jeems' life, and also in his mother's in a slightly less degree. But Jeems had no trespassing thought of the never-failing bundle as he went back for his gun in the company of his beloved Uncle Hep. At the most providential of moments, his hero of all heroes was at his side, and securing this mighty personage's pledge of secrecy he lost no time in telling him about the boy he hated. Marking the grip of Jeems' hand, and catching the telltale tremble in his voice, Hepsibah sat down upon the bag of ground corn and did not leave it until by shrewd questioning and sympathetic interest he had drawn from Jeems' heart a large part of what it had withheld from his parents. At a second loud blowing of Henri's dinner horn they rose to their feet, and as Hepsibah shouldered the corn, his round red face was like a full moon of promise and cheer.

"It doesn't take size to win a fight, Jeemsy," he said, speaking in a confidential way. "Barring this Dutchman at Albany, I've never been rib-roasted by a big man yet, and I'm only tolerable sized, you observe. I've always had a reasonable preference for the big ones, come as come can, for they are slower to move and fall harder, and nine out of ten of them carry fat. This Paul Tache, now—I know by your telling of him that you can cob and comb him until he begs for mercy. It's all what you've got your mind made up to, Jeemsy—nothing more and nothing less. And you've got your mind made up to warm him, so go and do it, I say."

Catherine came around the corner of the cabin to meet the plotters, and Hepsibah discreetly held back further words as he winked broadly at Jeems. It was the great night of two long years in the Bulain cabin, and Catherine's three Betty lamps and her Phoebe lamp and a dozen candles as well were lighted in honor of it, so that when darkness fell thick and starless about the wilderness, with masses of rain clouds gathering overhead, the home at the edge of Forbidden valley was bright with glow and cheer. The roast was cut open, and with attendant dishes of sukqu-tahash, johnnycake, potatoes, and carrots, and hasty pudding with maple syrup, gave opportunity for such feasting that an hour was well gone before Hepsibah Adams thrust back his end of the long table bench and brought forth his fat pack from under the stairs which led up to Jeems' sleeping loft.

"Just a few little trinkets," he began, using the identical words he had employed one year after another. "A few whim-whams and baubles for the boy, a bit of trumpery for Sister, and a farthing worth of nothing in particular for you, Henri. Ah, here we have the first package, with writing on it in the hand of the scholar who sold me the goods—a cap, a ruffe, a tucker, and a bolt of lace at five shillings a yard! Now who in this room can such sillies be for—unless—" and at Catherine's delighted exclamation he tossed the bundle to her. But scarce had she opened it, with her eyes intent upon her business, then Hepsibah unfurled a red silk petticoat in the candle glow, and this time Catherine sprang to her feet with an amazed intake of breath, for so well had Hepsibah arranged his surprise that, one after another, he had a white love-hood, a black love-hood, and three more petticoats on the table—one of scarlet with black lace, one of colored druggat with pointed lace, and a third of black silk with ash-gray lining; and as Catherine stood gazing upon these treasures fit for a queen he added to them two pairs of stays for an eighteen-inch waist, and then showered over them such an array of lace drowls, gorgets, piccadillies, and other neckerchiefs that Catherine closed her eyes for a moment and then opened them wide as if there might be a chance of some clever trickery in it.

"Dear Mother in heaven!" she cried. "Are all of these ravishing things for me? They must have cost a fortune!" pausing to look at her smiling brother and at the same time holding up the scarlet petticoat with black lace. "This one, for instance—"

"Two pounds fifteen shillings," said Hepsibah, opening his pack wider and working his hands quickly. "And to go with these dresses I have here ruffles and tuckers and threads and buttons and ribbons, and four pairs of the nicest shoes that ever came up the Hudson," and placing these last-named articles on the table with a flourish of arms, Hepsibah gave a glowing chuckle and paused to fill his pipe.

"As Long as You Live, You Must Never Part With This Pistol, Jeemsy."

Jeems' heart was near breaking with suspense, and it seemed to give an audible crack when his Uncle Hep's garbled hands went into the pack again. He drew a bulky package from his store and passed it to Jeems' father.

"Three of the finest pipes I ever laid my eyes on," he announced. "One made in Holland, one in London, and one in America, and five pounds of Virginia tobacco to go with them, Henri, along with a hat, a coat, and a pair of boots that may take you with honor to any swiftness or gentry merry-making this side of the sea. Now, how's that?" And he stepped back as if his pack were entirely empty and held nothing at all for Jeems.

For an eternity, it seemed to Jeems, his uncle remained in this terrifying posture. Then, with deliberate and aggravating slowness, Hepsibah Adams returned to his pack.

No one of the three who were watching him would ever have guessed that Hepsibah's act was one weighted heavily with the force of destiny, nor that with dramatic inevitableness it was to change the course of human lives, bringing the high down to earth, and the earthly to great heights, losing passions and hatreds and loves, breeding tragedies and joys, and ending, at last, in what it is the purpose of this humble chronicle of human events to narrate.

A swift-coming thought, a deft return into the pack of a small bundle which he had intended for Catherine, and Hepsibah had changed a world. On such trivial happenings do the most powerful of the fates sometimes rest. Out of the farthest corner of the collapsing pack he brought this bundle to light once more and unwrapped it, as he turned toward Jeems' big-eyed, anxious face.

"Jeemsy," he said, "if I've put the notches in my memory right, you were born on the coldest January day I ever saw, and that makes you just twelve years and four months old this evening, which means that only three years and eight months lie between you and the day when you can be counted a man. According to law, you are a king's subject of maturity from that day and can take life and all its belongings into your own hands, so long as you are honest about it, and can stand up in equality before the stiffest periwigged judge in the Colonies or New France. In other words, Jeemsy, I mean that in less

Great Buddhist Temple Deserted and in Ruins

It is the Chandi Borobudur, at Djokjarta, the ancient temple ruin 325 miles up the hills west of Batavia. Its carved, gray, volcanic rocks tell the story of Gautama Siddhartha the Enlightened, or the Buddha, for whom the temple bells tinkle in Ceylon and Burma and the bronze gongs clash in 10,000 lamaseries in Tibet, China and Mongolia, writes Allan T. Holcomb, in the New York Herald Tribune.

Vast in size, magnificent in architectural conception and unbelievable in its wealth of fantastic bas-relief, the Borobudur now stands desolate and solitary in the midst of one of the world's most teeming fertile plains. A bit of the ashes of the All Wise and Enlightened One rests under the mighty stupa with only an occasional than four short years you will be a full-fledged man!"

Having delivered himself of this introductory peroration Hepsibah finished unwrapping the package, and never had Catherine beheld such a handsome piece of velvet as that which her brother displayed in the candle glow. It was, par excellence, the finest of the treasures he had brought, a cloth of matchless beauty, a crimson glory so filled with changing humors and colors that it seemed to be alive in his hands. Surely this was another present for his mother, Jeems thought. But to his amazement and Catherine's surprise Hepsibah thrust the cloth into Jeems' hands.

"For Mademoiselle Marie Antoinette Tonteur from her devoted admirer, Daniel James Bulain," he announced. "Jeemsy, don't blush. Twelve and ten are not far from sixteen and fourteen, when you will be man and woman, and if ever a seigneur's daughter finds herself lucky it will be on the day she marries a son of the tribe of Adams. The writing on it, Jeemsy, tells where it came from and how much it cost; and along with it I have brought you some nankeen for britches and clothes, four shirts, and a three-cornered hat with a black ribbon, six handkerchiefs, and a jackknife, two pairs of serge britches, as many of new shoes, and—this," and from the now completely emptied pack he drew forth a beautiful long-barreled pistol, his eyes aglow with a fighting man's pride as he fondled it in the light of the candles and pointed out its merits to Jeems. "As long as you live, you must never part with this pistol, Jeemsy," he said. "It isn't new, you see, but its record is one of glory as long as my arm, and I'll tell you about it some day. It's a killer, lad, a killer deadly and sure, good for a hundred paces with less than an inch of drop," and he gave the weapon into Jeems' hands. An instant of disapproval gathered in Catherine's eyes.

"It was kind of you to bring the cloth for Antoinette but I do not care for the pistol, Hepsibah," she said. "A pistol makes me think of—men fighting men. And here we are at peace, having need only of the rifle and of Jeemsy's bow and arrows to bring us meat. I feel it is not best!"

As she spoke thus confidently of peace, a cloud came over Hepsibah's face, but in a moment he had laughed it away and was telling her that within a week she would be as proud of her boy's marksmanship as she now seemed fearful of the pistol's influence upon his future.

The next day was the day of the auction sale at Lussan's place. Lussan was a wealthy farmer at the edge of the next seigneurie, ten miles away. He was returning to his old home near the Isle of Orleans, a country he liked better than the Richelieu, and was selling most of his goods. Among these were a plow with an iron point, a forty-gallon soap kettle, and a loom which Jeems' father wanted, so he had planned to start with the ox early in the morning. Jeems had heard Tonteur say he intended to buy Lussan's three slaves, a mother and father and daughter, and that the young wench was with her father. He would take his treasure package with him to Lussan's and find an opportunity to give it to her.

Should Paul Tache be there and dare to overlord him again, or laugh in his meanly suggestive way, or speak sneeringly, or so much as say a word against his gift for Toineette.

A rumble of fresh-growing thunder was advancing out of the west, and preceding it came a roar of wind and a deluge of rain. Lightning cut once more in vivid flashings across the narrow panes of the bedroom window, and the roof seemed to bend and groan under a sudden torrential bombardment. Jeems fought in unison with the elements. His spirit mounted savagely with the turmoil. He had his enemy down and was thrusting his head into wet and slimy mud. He was beating his face and eyes, and spilling his splended raiment, and pulling out his hair. And Marie Antoinette was looking on. With the gorgeous red velvet in her hands and her eyes big and starry, she was watching him as he choked and kicked and pommelled the life out of Paul Tache!

The outburst of thunder and wind and deluge, a whim of playful spring, passed as swiftly as it had come, and, in passing, it left Jeems breathing quickly and fiercely in his bed.

He had risen in these moments to reckless heights, and his mind, hot with its desire for action, had settled with grim assurance upon what would happen the next day.

First he would present his gift to Toineette.

Then he would do what his Uncle Hep had told him to do. He would whip Paul Tache.

Lesson for March 8

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

GOLDEN TEXT—Thou shalt not avenge, nor bear any grudge against the children of thy people, but thou shalt love thy neighbor as thyself: I am the Lord.

LESSON TEXT—Luke 10:25-37.

PRIMARY TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Real Friend.

JUNIOR TOPIC—Jesus' Story of a Real Friend.

INTERMEDIATE AND SENIOR TOPIC—Serving and Sharing.

YOUNG PEOPLE AND ADULT TOPIC—The Stewardship of Life.

I. How to Inherit Eternal Life (vv. 25-38).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 25). The term "lawyer" here means one versed in religious law—the Scriptures, not lawyer in our modern sense of that term. It would more nearly correspond to our theological professor. The lawyer's object was to trip Jesus, to induce him to take such a stand as would weaken his influence as a teacher. He expected Jesus to set forth some new ceremonies which would conflict with or disparage the law of Moses.

2. Jesus' question (v. 26). Though Jesus knew the motive of the lawyer, he did not evade his question. He sent him to the law, the field which was familiar to him. He thus robbed him of his own weapon.

3. The lawyer's reply (v. 27). He made an intelligent answer, declaring that the entire content of the law was embraced in love to God and man. This expresses the whole of human duty.

4. Jesus' reply (v. 28). The straightforward answer went to the heart of the lawyer. Perfect love to God and man is truly the way of life. No man has yet had nor can have such love. His sinful condition precludes its possibility. Man's failure to measure up to this requirement is his condemnation. The lawyer keenly felt this thrust. He was defeated on his own grounds and convicted of guilt.

II. Who is My Neighbor (vv. 29-37).

1. The lawyer's question (v. 29). This question reveals the insincerity of the lawyer. Christ's answer had reached his conscience, and now he seeks to escape the difficulty by asking a captious question. Lawyer-like he sought to get off by raising a question as to the meaning of words.

2. Jesus' answer (vv. 30-37). Jesus' reply more than answered the lawyer's question. In the Parable of the Good Samaritan he makes clear who is a neighbor, and also what it means to be a neighbor and what loving a neighbor means. Christ's answer had a double meaning. He not only made clear who is my neighbor, but made it clear that the lawyer was not playing the neighbor.

a. Who is my neighbor? This destitute and wounded man, left on the wayside by the robbers, is a man who needs a neighbor. My neighbor, therefore, is the one who needs my help, whether he lives next door or on the other side of the world. It does not regard locality, nationality, or blood relation.

b. What being a neighbor means. Our supreme concern should not be "Who is my neighbor?" but "Whose neighbor am I?" To be a neighbor is:

(1) To be on the look-out for those in need of our help (v. 33). It is keen to discern the needs of those with whom it is brought into contact. (2) To have compassion on the needy (v. 33). Christ's compassion was aroused as he came into contact with those who were suffering and in need. (3) To give to those in need (v. 34). Love does not calculate the cost of its actions. Whenever there is calculation of cost, there is the expression of selfishness. Many are willing to give money to help the poor and needy but are unwilling personally to minister to them. The true neighbor gives himself as well as his money.

(4) To bind up wounds (v. 34). If we have eyes to discern, we shall see many wounds about us that need attention. (5) To set the helpless ones on our beasts while we walk (v. 34). This is the proof of the genuineness of our love. Those who are like Christ will deny themselves in order to have something to give to those who are in need. (6) To bring to the inn and take care of the unfortunate (v. 34). Genuine love does not leave its service incomplete. True love follows up the needy. (7) To give money (v. 35). It costs a good deal to be a neighbor. Love is the most expensive thing in the world. It cost God his only Son. It cost Jesus Christ his life.

This parable has been through the centuries the classic illustration of true Christian neighborliness.

Sons of St. Patrick

By ELMO SCOTT WATSON

AS MARCH 17 approaches and thousands of Americans, not only those of Irish blood but others as well, prepare to honor the patron saint of the Emerald Isle by wearing "a bit av green" on St. Patrick's day, it is fitting that they give some thought to the contribution which these "sons of St. Patrick," the Irish, have made to the building of this nation. And to appreciate that significance, it is necessary to go back to the beginning of the republic and to inquire into the number of Irish who were in this country when the Revolution began and who, remembering the centuries of oppression behind them in Ireland before they came to America, were among the first to take up arms in this newest struggle for liberty from English domination.

The researches of historians in recent years have brought to light the fact that a surprisingly large percentage of the patriots of '76 were "fighting Irish"—surprisingly large in view of the popular idea that the majority of the colonists were of pure English blood. They have also revealed that nearly 1,500 officers and 12,000 of the rank and file in the Revolutionary army, navy and militia bore characteristic Irish names, indicating that they were either born in Ireland or were of Irish ancestry.

But the greatest contribution of the Irish to the patriot cause was that of leadership as shown by the fact that in the list of generals in the Continental army there were eleven who were born in Ireland, and eight others who were the sons of Irish parents. Add to that list of Irish-born patriots three signers of the Declaration of Independence, the sea captain whose name is preserved in history as the "Father of the American Navy," and the surgeon who served as Washington's secretary in the Revolution and who later became secretary of war under Washington and Adams, and it will be seen why there is Thompson was taken prisoner, but two months later was allowed to return to Philadelphia on parole. It was nearly two years before he was exchanged and he died in Carlisle, Pa., in the last year of the war.

Irvine, who was born near Inniskillen, Ireland, November 3, 1741, was a colonel in Thompson's brigade and shared with him in the Three Rivers attack and in the captivity which followed. After his exchange in 1778 he was placed in command of the Second Pennsylvania brigade, promoted to brigadier-general in 1779 and served with Lord Stirling and "Mad Anthony" Wayne the following year.

GEN. WILLIAM IRVINE

In 1782 he was given the difficult assignment of commanding at Fort Pitt and guarding the northwestern frontier from Indian attacks, as well as adjusting the differences between the Virginians and the Pennsylvanians over the ownership of that region. He filled the position so admirably and so won the esteem of Washington that in 1794 the first President placed him in command of the troops which suppressed the famous "Whisky Rebellion" of that year.

Maxwell was born in Ireland but came to this country with his parents who settled in New Jersey. After making a record for himself as a gallant and skillful soldier during the colonial wars he became colonel of the Second New Jersey regiment at the outbreak of the Revolution and took part in Montgomery's Canadian expedition. He was promoted to brigadier general in 1776, served under General Schuyler on Lake Champlain and in the early part of 1777 commanded the advance guard of the American forces near Elizabethtown, N. J. He fought bravely at the head of a New Jersey brigade at Brandywine and Germantown, spent the winter at Valley Forge and at the battle of Monmouth contributed largely to the American victory, after which he harassed the enemy as it retreated. He served under Gen. John Sullivan in the expedition against the Iroquois in 1779 and retired from the army in 1780. General Maxwell died November 12, 1793.

When Col. William Thompson led his battalion of Pennsylvania riflemen to the siege of Boston his lieutenant colonel was a brother Irishman—Edward Hand, born in Kings county, December 21, 1744. He had entered the British service and in 1774 was a member of the Eighteenth Royal Irish regiment, which he accompanied to America as a surgeon's mate. After the reorganization of the Continental army early in 1776 Hand was made colonel of a rifle regiment which so distinguished itself at the Battle of Long Island and in the campaign through the Jerseys that the name, "a Hand rifleman," became synonymous with daring and gallantry in action. In 1777 Hand was made a brigadier general, the next year he helped guard the northern New York frontier under Gen. John Stark, and in 1779 he distinguished himself during the Sullivan expedition. In 1780 Hand was placed in charge of a brigade and later he became adjutant general of the army. After the war he served in congress and died September 3, 1802.

Akin to the distinction of being "a Hand rifleman" was that of being "a Morgan rifleman," after the expert marksmen of the Continental army had been organized in 1777 into a "rifle corps," the command of which was given to that doughty fighter, Gen. Daniel Morgan of Virginia. The lieutenant colonel of that outfit was another Irishman, Richard Butler, who had been lieutenant colonel of one of the Pennsylvania regiments recruited at the beginning of the Revolution. Although Butler's services during the Revolution were distinguished enough, his greatest fame came later. In 1787 he was appointed agent for Indian affairs and in 1791, as major general, in the United States regular army he commanded the right wing of Gen. Arthur St. Clair's army which had been sent against the hostile Indians in the old Northwest. On the morning of November 4, 1791, began one of the greatest disasters which has ever befallen American troops—St. Clair's Defeat—and among the slain, after a gallant but futile defense against the savage horde, was brave Gen. Richard Butler.

One of the greatest Indian fighters this country has ever known—at least, he was commander in one of the greatest Indian battles ever fought in America—was Andrew Lewis, born in Donegal, Ireland, about 1720. His father was the first white settler in Augusta county, Virginia, and the son early showed a fondness for military life, serving as a major in the regiment commanded by Washington in the Ohio campaign of 1754 and 1755. He led the Sandy Creek expedition of 1756 and while serving under the British general, Grant, in 1758 was captured by the French and held as a prisoner in Montreal for some time. But the year 1774 was the high point in his career, for in that year as brigadier general of the Virginia militia he commanded the frontiersmen who defeated the Shawnees under their great chief, Cornstalk, in the famous Battle of Point Pleasant during Lord Dunmore's war. This has been called "the first all-American battle in history" since it was the first time that American frontiersmen, without the aid of British troops, fought a major engagement with the Indians.

In 1776, at the suggestion of Washington who knew the ability of Lewis, he was appointed brigadier general in the Continental army and soon thereafter defeated the English forces under his former governor, Lord Dunmore. Falling health compelled Lewis' resignation from the army before he had a chance to distinguish himself further and he died September 27, 1781.

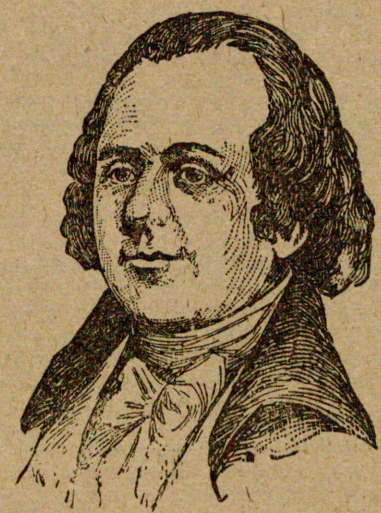

The other Irish-born generals, Walter Stewart, John Armstrong and Stephen Moylan, were not so outstanding as those previously named but their records were honorable enough to bring considerable distinction to them. Moylan is chiefly noted for being a member of Washington's staff and for being appointed commissary general, a position which he resigned to recruit the First Pennsylvania regiment of cavalry of which he was colonel, serving at Valley Forge, with Wayne in the north and with Gen. Nathaniel Greene in the south. He became a brigadier general in 1782 and after the war served as United States commissioner of loans, dying April 11, 1811.

John Armstrong was more noted for gallant service during the French and Indian war than during the Revolution, although he rose to the rank of brigadier general in the Continental army, a post which he resigned in 1777.

Proud as is the record of the "sons of St. Patrick" in the Continental army there is even greater reason for pride in their contribution to our naval history. For the first "American" officer to capture a British ship was an Irishman—Commodore John Barry. At the outbreak of the Revolution he was a wealthy shipmaster in Philadelphia. When the Continental congress in October, 1775, authorized the purchase of two ships and their conversion into men-of-war, Barry sailed his merchantman, Black Prince, into the harbor and sold her to congress. She was renamed the Alfred and later became the flagship of the first American fleet.

More ships were added later and Barry was commissioned a captain and placed in command of the brig, Lexington. On April 17, 1776, the Lexington captured the British tender, Edward, the first prize ever taken by a regularly commissioned officer of the United States navy. But his most brilliant feat was in 1781 when in command of the Alliance he topped off the capture of several British privateers by having a fight with two British vessels, both of which were better armed than his vessel, and capturing both. Barry was both sailor and soldier for he took Washington across the Delaware and fought at Trenton, Princeton and elsewhere. After the Revolution he superintended the building of the frigate, United States, and commanded her until she was retired from service. He was the first senior officer, with the rank of commodore, after the reorganization of the navy in 1794 and he died in Philadelphia September 13, 1803.

Every American knows that our national anthem, "The Star-Spangled Banner," was written during the British attack on Fort McHenry in the War of 1812, but few of them know that this fort was named for an Irish doctor. James McHenry was born in Ireland November 16, 1753, came to America in 1771, studied under the celebrated Dr. Benjamin Rush of Philadelphia and on the outbreak of the Revolution volunteered in the Continental army. He served as surgeon to a Pennsylvania regiment, was made a prisoner by the British when Fort Mifflin was captured and was not exchanged until 1778. He was then appointed secretary to Washington and from that time was a close friend of the commander in chief, who when he became President made McHenry secretary of war in 1796. He continued in this position through the administration of President John Adams, retiring in 1801 and dying in Baltimore May 3, 1816.

Of the three Irish-born signers of the Declaration of Independence, James Smith, George Taylor and Matthew Thornton, the latter upheld the "fighting Irish" tradition by being both a soldier as well as a statesman. His father, upon emigration to America, settled in Massachusetts where Matthew was educated. He studied medicine in Leicester and built up a profitable practice in Londonderry, N. H. During the French and Indian war he went as a surgeon with the New Hampshire troops in the expedition against Louisburg. Later he was appointed a justice of the peace and also served as a militia colonel. He was chosen speaker of the assembly in January 5, 1776, and in September of that year was elected delegate to the Continental congress. As in the case of the Pennsylvania delegates he was allowed to sign his name to the engrossed copy of the Declaration, although he was elected after its passage and did not take his seat in the congress until November of 1776. He was re-elected for another year in December but retired from public office in 1779. Eventually he settled in Newburyport, Mass., where he died June 24, 1803.

TINLEY PARK

Obituary of Mrs. Carl Englehardt.
Wilhelmina-Bertha Elizabeth Englehardt nee Abbe was born June 22, 1885 in Chicago. Her parents were Frederick Abbe and Catherine nee Bormet. Soon after the birth of the deceased, the father died, and the mother and her infant daughter stayed with her parents temporarily. The mother eventually married Mr. Carl Kimmel and the family lived on a farm in the town of Orland. On January 1, 1913 the deceased was united in marriage with Mr. George Kelber. One daughter Esther was born to this union. About 3 years after the marriage her husband died, at the beginning of the same year, 1916 the deceased had also lost her step father. After this she lived for about five years with her mother in Blue Island. Then she was united in marriage on Feb. 8, 1922 with Mr. Charles Englehardt, a widower who had lost his wife and daughter two years before. A daughter Alma, was born to this union.

The deceased enjoyed usually good health and could perform her duties in a satisfactory way. When her aged mother became seriously ill she went to her bedside on Friday, Feb. 20 in order to assist her sisters in taking care of her. Little did she surmise that she would not return home alive. On Monday afternoon she had made some purchases and was returning home with them. She reached the door of her mother's home and with the cry for help she sank into the arms of her sister, Mrs. Elizabeth Braun of Harvey and her spirit had departed her body. A hurriedly called physician could not resuscitate her. Heart failure being the cause of her death. She attained the age of 45 years, 8 months and 1 day.

The sorrowing mourners are: her husband, Charles Englehardt, her daughters Esther and Alma, one son Irvin; her aged mother, whose sickness made it impossible for her to be present at the funeral; one brother John Kimmel; two sisters, Mrs. Elizabeth Braun and Anna.

The funeral took place on Thursday Feb. 26 at Trinity Lutheran church and it was one of the largest assemblies ever gathered at a funeral at the church. The pastor, Rev. Wm. Greve, preached the funeral sermon in German and in English basing his addresses on I Cor. 13. 9-12 and Ps. 37. 5.

The pallbearers were the neighbors, George Schilling, Edward Holz, Carl Schilling, John Fabrenholz, Adam Breitbarth and E. Siekmann. Cousins and others carried the many beautiful floral offerings. At present the condition of the deceased's mother remains practically the same.

Property Owners Pay For Street Improvements

stricken that they could not put stone on these streets from the money collected from the $5 a year vehicle tax assessed every auto owner in the village, but the property owners along these streets had to take up a subscription among themselves and had to pay for having these streets so they could drive their cars on these streets and on top of that were asked to pay their $5 per year special vehicle tax just the same. About $750 a year is collected from this special tax but what is the money used for?
Improvements that are not costly and for which money should be available are not made, but unneeded improvements which would plunge the village into debt for a life time, are advocated.
Do not let anyone fool you with costly special assessment smoke screen propaganda, for if you do, you will surely regret it. Be sure to vote the new board in regardless of any personal feelings you may have for or against any of the candidates for this is not a personality campaign but is a campaign to save your community from a life time of debt. Be sure you cast your vote for all four of the above named candidates as above mentioned on Tuesday, April 21, 1931.

AN INTRODUCTION TO OUR FEATHERED FRIENDS

By Mrs. Hilding Anderson
Thru the kind thoughtfulness of Mr. John Boeyer, over a hundred Tinley Park children enjoyed a pleasant hour at the Community Hall Tuesday evening.
With Mrs. Boeyer operating the lantern sixty colored plates of birds were presented, while Mrs. Hilding Anderson read entertaining as well as instructive stories by an authority of the International Harvester Company on bird life.
Intimate knowledge of our feathered neighbors should serve to inspire our children with right views concerning living things and the conservation of wild life and it is hoped this pleasant hour, with the American Legion as host, will result in the protection of our outdoor friends, a movement being sponsored by the Tinley Park Garden Club.
Thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Boeyer, Mrs. John Klepper, the American Legion, the Tinley Park Garden Club and to the children who were most orderly and attentive. CO-OPERATE—YOU CAN'T GET FAR WORKING ALONE.
